Ode to the Capstone ! By Christopher M.

*“Noeton, oh Noeton, where for art thou Noeton.
What Light through yonder Third Eye breaks?”*

Intellect, the faculty by which we abstract, set measure, play odds and project possibilities, exists as a flashlight to illuminate that upon which it is fixed. Within a field of uncertain darkness, this single circle of light may serve to keep us from stumbling into traps right before us, but does little to provide useful data about what lurks outside of its own scope.

What if there was a faculty which dictates a new impulse to action for this Intellect? A faculty in which the points desired for illumination are known quickly, and the need to spill light in all directions to find what we seek, is no more a burdensome task?

Noeton describes the interface between thoughts as objects, emotions as motive forces, and actualization (manifestation), while Nous, is a term for the substance itself, and Naos; the Secret of the Substance.

Noetic thinking would be best described as the action of this substance present within our thoughts, making one more aware of their own thoughts and the interconnected web that spins their emotions, altering “reality”.

This thinking stands in contrast to dianoia, which is based on sensory input and purely mathematical rationale. Nous is the intuitional intellect, capable of vast apprehension, efficiently, and clarity, without the processes that burden pure dianoia.

Nous (Divine Intellect) is the “first principle”, the essence of the ordered mentation and concentration that propagates all forms. As the impulse to its own self creation through its own thought forms, which become all worlds, the mentation of this intellect is the catalyst for life and it’s vast multiplicity, and it is also, the exponentiator of it’s destruction.

In the hindu paradigm, it is said that the universe exists while Shiva meditates in solitary stillness, holding the forms that are “reality” in its own mind, until Shiva’s “eye opens and obliterates all forms.

In finite comparison to Shiva, when a human opens it’s eyes, the forms that are sustained during any focused visualization become occluded by sensory input. Consciously sustained internal beliefs and visions, cease to be apparent, but nevertheless they persist beyond the bounds of sensory perception, influencing what we think we are seeing.

Seen in light of fractal dynamics, quantum physics, this bit of mythology comes into sharper definition. It has been demonstrated in recent years that electrons react to attention, collapsing into definite position when observed, and existing in superposition when ignored.

Attention, re-orders the field into a fixed position.

All humans have this ability to effect matter and are in fact, doing this all the time, but few accumulate Nous to the extent of becoming conscious of it, and even fewer to the degree of being able to apply that awareness into kinetic forms of “mind over matter” awareness.

Those who do, may use it personally, with calculated conscious effort, and become vast magnetic centers of spin, attracting increasing Nous, playing their world as an instrument of desire, and motivating others with their melodious progressions.

Egregore is a common term in the western mystery tradition to describe the aggregate condition of many individual minds coagulating into their own repository of transient and fixed forms. The effect these forms can have on the waking world cannot be understated. At this level, harnessing the power of belief to influence the Noeton is actively cultivated by those conscious of it.

Ordo Ab Chao.

Working to effect the Noeton ranges from the simple act of using the imagination, work, and action, to change our own character and potential, bringing something into form with manual effort, tools, planning, and persistence, to the more subtle mental/kinetic effects upon the continuum, such as the Power of Attraction and interpersonal synchronicity webs that leave little to coincidence.

At its pinnacle, it encompasses the psychic ability to push upon the atomic world itself, and bringing forth telekinesis, astral projection, direct sensing (remote viewing) and very direct “mind over matter” manifestations, and other so-called “supernatural” activity.

Broad emphasis tends to be placed on intellect when considering consciousness, often to the extreme of reading all negative emotions as weakness, and making failures a cause for shame, instead of flexing these muscles and breaking them down until they are strong and resilient.

Many mystics and intellectuals alike endeavor into a tragic wasteland of self denial, often without realizing it - rejecting the onslaught of their own emotions regarded as weakness. Yet, the act of “mistaking our emotions for a non-reality, or something of which to be ashamed, is the enemy of Noetic Intellect.

Our character is the sum of our experiences, which becomes a reaction to the emotions we have tasted, and our response to these emotions will, over time, fuse our potential with certain limiters.

Perhaps most interesting of all, is the effect that our emotions (or repression of them) have upon our intellect. All too often in the intellectual pursuit of knowledge, the emotional/abstract is lost - and this does not increase the intellect of man, but rather, places a very burdensome handicap upon the individual, and robs them of Nous.

So feel, drink deep from the cup of life, and regret not which provides rich experience. A mark of Noetic Consciousness is the ability to perceive the abstract, to understand and probe the meaning of symbols, to express “thoughts beyond words” with allegory, a profound appreciation of well-written poetry, to see and feel that which is “more than the sum of its parts”.

It is important when considering the Noeton, and Noetic Consciousness as a Science - to feel deeply our emotions, mind our thoughts, take care with our actions, and alter any actions or thought sequences which are not found to be in agreement with that which we seek to bring into our experience.

The contrast that exists between what we are vs what we wish to be, between our ideals, and the actions we are taking to embody them, determines our state of being, and the Power we have access to.

There is no objective universe that exists apart from the subjective universe, only the widening circumferences of a vast sea of countless flashlights swimming in an Abyss, seeking to illuminate the panorama, to know of themselves, through experience.

As above, so below, dear Lord Shiva.

Change how we look at all things, and what we see will change.

Noeton Personal Interpretation

By Fausto Ripley

Since a very early age, I remember feeling different about my environment and existence. Feelings of desperation would manifest upon trying to reconcile where I would go after dying. I used to think that life was very short and there was not enough time for all the things I wanted to achieve throughout my life. I questioned death and the anxiety of disappearing forever, seemed irrational.

I knew deep inside that what you see, feel, smell, hear and taste were not the only realities. Clear dreams with dead relatives provided me different perspectives about the afterlife and repeated astral projections of flying experiences and encounters with extraterrestrial beings trying to communicate information left me wanting to discover more about the occult.

I noticed certain patterns that were repetitive in nature and science, which made me realize that for example: fine arts like music, painting and sculpture had the same mathematical values and patterns as the geometrical measurements in nature and the universe; that even the thinking process could be explained with numerical values.

There was something else, invisible to the naked eye and the rest of the senses; something magical and divine that gave life to a tangible reality. My reasoning for this introduction regarding personal experiences relates to the Typhonian Mysteries book because, it suggests the importance of our past, and how crucial is to honor our past lives in order to honor our present.

After reading the Typhonian Mysteries book I realized that throughout my life I have been already applying the concept of the Noeton; I have always been thinking with consciousness.

Noeton is comparable to GNOTHI SEAUTON, in that the process of thinking with consciousness elevates your level of personal realization; "Know thyself".

Ancient Greek mystery schools based teachings in dualistic views of the universe, composed of energy and matter, but with a primal component called NOUS. NOUS was the primal source of divine intelligence that allowed everything to exist in the universe. The Greeks embraced existence of the visible and invisible, emphasizing that there was a material that filled the skies called AETHER.

In fact, AETHER was represented as a God that lived above the skies. AETHER was an immaterial source that surrounded and connected all homo sapiens through the invisible part of men, the soul consciousness. The Greeks created a system in which man can grasp intrinsic universal knowledge with a science called sacred geometry. Geometry allows us to put form to mysteries created by the Gods.

One of the most important symbols is the Pentagram of Typhon.

This symbolizes the divine gift human beings have received from the Prince of Darkness, Typhon.

The pentagram represents the first universal number as it contains 5 points. The number 5 contains 1, 2, 3, and 4, which sums 10 in theosophical Pythagorean addition, and reduces to 1 in theosophical reduction, the source of the whole universe.

The circle around the pentagram represents the universe we inhabit and the inverted five pointed star represents how we, with our senses, bodies and souls are able to exist within the universe. I realize that the star does not touch the circle, which means that as individuals, we do not necessarily have to become one with the universe.

The Prince of Darkness has given us the gift of Noeton, the divine consciousness to become our own Gods. The circle surrounding the inverted pentagram is not completely closed, it is in fact open in two sections, which makes me think of the ability of human the consciousness to expand into other worlds and dimensions. Typhon's gift to humanity of limitless consciousness permit us to connect and interact with the universal Aether through our thinking.

Thinking is a form of Aether, which allows us to create anything we desire in our lives. For something to be created, first it needs to start with a thought. A thought with consciousness is far superior than simple thoughts. A thought with consciousness and intention is the key to unlock the mysteries of the universe. It also removes and unfolds the veils of the soul.

Once we have achieved NOETON, we allow the soul to guide us to superior knowledge and this superiority will reveal a new existence.

The Typhonian Mysteria book opens a door to another world and dimension. The dictionary describes mystery as something difficult to explain or a subject that must be kept secret. Our ancestors built Mysteries Schools with two kinds of teachings that were given to the adept; the exoteric and esoteric teachings.

Adepts were delicately scrutinized before any esoteric information was past to them and only a few received the keys to unlock the secrets of the universe. The information given in the Mysteria book, including the contact ritual, carries behind the veils, the spark of light of Typhon.

Typhon, the son of mother earth, Gaia and Tartaros the pit, is the God of this earth, because he came from earth and fought the God of the heavens Zeus to maintain the spark of knowledge in humanity.

Typhon represents mankind. His powerful, fearful appearance is the man's mind. Typhon, being trapped in Mount Etna is a representation of the powerful dormant, wilful mind of mankind awaiting to awaken from the dreamy existence to the true reality.

Noeton is the gift of the Typhonian Gods to mankind. In other words, the ability to intentionally and consciously empower our thinking to re-create our reality. Through a system of belief, we The Typhonians, can change our destinies and differentiate from the rest of the homo sapiens. The intention is to rise above and become one with the source.

Once a homo sapiens learns its true nature, can proceed to manipulate its environment through Conquerism to shape its cosmos. This metamorphosis is only possible if the bloodline genetic disposition is available.

My early experiences and intuitions clearly show me that I am not just another Homo sapiens. With the discovery of Noeton and the gift of Typhon I now realize that I have been reprogramming myself without knowing it. And, I strongly believe in the axiom:

“Look and you will find.”

I have found the rational answers I have been looking all my life. Typhon is the rational God of wisdom and intelligence, which is why we have received the gift of Noeton.

My understanding about Noeton

By Lourdes

Noeton is not a tangible place that we can sense with our current faculties given to us at birth on this planet. However, through this body we can gain the knowledge that was lost long ago.

We are giving a second chance for those of us who are willing to do so. Our physical bodies carry the DNA with a locked door that we must open. The current mainstream science speculates that 80+ percent of the human DNA is junk.

But how can we trust them when it refutes the fact that once they originated from the occult and mystery schools from the past and now curses and even ridicules them?

Spiritual experiences cannot be duplicated as science wants it because it is not a thing that can be measured expecting the exact results every time.

My current experiences tell me that the “junk DNA” is a secret passage to where there is no return and I’m looking forward to that. For the last few weeks I’ve been experiencing the most fascinating changes in my body and at a speed that never thought would be possible. It all started to happen once I opened the Alpha book and from that point on the door has opened wide for me. Through my daily life and dreams I experience what others would love to but because of their fear of the “unknown” can’t.

However, our DNA is not the only part of what we were. It is in every essence of us in body and spirit. We are connected to the universe, to what we see and the unseen. And when we wake up from the diluted state of mind we are we will be able to recognize the source of our primordial existence.

It is a mind game we play on planet earth, but the wrong game. The human strives to succeed by accumulating stuff, but neglects to release the real child in him, as he was when he was born.

The [hidden] child is the one who dreams big and fantasizes changing his reality to what he wants.

Human adults see a group of children playing tea party sipping from empty vessels, but these children feel and taste the sweet nectar they have prepared and share it with others. These creatures in little bodies know how the universe plays it and how to manifest the proper environment to feel complete, only to be ripped apart by the human adult who doesn’t believe in dreams and fantasy any more.

Something took him away from keep believing in him. This chain has continued for centuries and the next human is happier to know that the next one beside him is more lost than he is. And that is good for him because being ignorant feels better. He doesn’t have to wonder any more on whom he is or if he’s doing the right thing.

All he has to do now is to follow the next one who will dictate his life until he dies, and even though he may feel at some point disappointed he will complain and continue because it's the right thing to do.

He doesn't want to be leader, a conqueror. He wants to be conquered and be submissive. Whatever his leader perceives he will do without questioning authority.

His leader will force him to believe in a reality that will curse him in the end and make him mad and he'll be severely punished if he dares to question if the Gods and Goddesses from history were real, even though his life has changed from the time he realized that the Tooth Fairy was his mom placing that dollar bill under his pillow and Santa Claus was his dad stuffing his toys under his bed.

His leader will persuade him to think that after these encounters the rest of his fantasies are no more and must submit to the reality his leader will impose onto him. Never mind that the submissive human had many questions still to be answered and at some point in his life something magnificent crossed his life and made him think or that a dream was so real he wondered if when he woke up was the illusion.

For his leader these are sins and must be punished and fear is implanted in the human's mind to prevent him from wonder on his own. The children from that tea party are the ones who understand the concept of NOETON at its fullest.

They know that they are Gods and Goddesses in control of their moment. They conquer their thoughts bringing it to reality. They understand that they were born with that innate knowledge that has nothing to do with the mundane knowledge homo-sapiens teach them.

They think it and it happens and they think further what the next step "will" be and then again it happens. They have perfect minds guided by NOETON. Their divine essence they brought to their bodies when they were born is reflected in every thought, speech, and action.

They don't need the approval of the adults for they are the conquerors of their reality and everything they wish happens at will. The temper tantrum of a child is only a rebellion, the manifestation of his "will" to do as he wants against his human parents and gets frustrated when overpowered and left defenceless.

The child's mind with full awareness and consciousness is the complete manifestation of NOETON.

The one who experiences Noeton will begin understanding who he is. That part of his DNA locked for so long will unleash and release all sorts of good stuff. He will feel reborn with different resonance. His body as well as his spirit attuned to the universe, to the source and to those who have been waiting for him to wake up from a fraudulent dream to the real thing. His perspective of the world he used to perceive will never be the same. He will meet again the Typhonian intelligence, the forgotten knowledge lost long ago. And one step further will get him closer to the source and to conquer homo-sapiens, the world, and the universe once more.

The Devil's Armchair

This is the exercise of the reprogramming procedure. You must have 3 items to complete this exercise.

- 1) One comfortable armchair,
- 2) A black candle
- 3) and the stargate.

Put the black candle in front of the stargate and sit comfortable on the armchair in your chamber with the atmosphere of the burning candle.

This exercise must be done before sleeping, during the night. Start gazing in the mirror until you feel the darkness/Aether consumes you.

Proceed with this until you are totally calm, without any external thoughts. Furthermore, imagine yourself after 1 year and what you wish to happen in this 1 year.

Try to imagine and experience everything that will happen in those 12 months. Moreover, experience that you are not aging at all and the other people that are involved in this exercise are aging slowly.

Proceed with this exercise by adding more years each time you are performing the Timechair exercise.

Reverse the universe

A very significant exercise for a very significant purpose; the function of traveling to other worlds during the sleep condition.

Before the sleep, calm down until you bring yourself to a relax position. Then try to remember the day that has gone but in reverse! This means that you must first remember what you have done right before you went to bed till the time you woke up the last morning.

By putting your memory function backwards, you will lose the full consciousness of your physical body and you will feel some moments of falling to a hole. The result of this exercise will occur during the sleep (Note: The more details you remember backwards during the exercise, the better results you will have).

Finally, when you wake up in the next morning you must follow the exercise of the generation procedure.

Generation procedure

Immediately after waking up (not later!), you must visualize in your mind what will follow the present day. It does not matter if there will show up surprises or things that you will not imagine, just focus on what you believe to happen the present day till you go to bed (Note: Write on a piece of paper what you have visualized, just to keep in mind the whole day).

Suggestions: Try to use Conquerism by your imagination and then perform the Encounter Ritual.

(Note: It is extremely important to escape from the homo sapiens perception.)
